

Caroline Monaghan
Radleian Society Manager
Radley College

Having spent over 20 years in the corporate world focussed on technology marketing, Caroline moved to Radley College to drive greater engagement with the Radley Community.

Over the last four years, she has totally modernised the society and moved it from an institution which mainly delivers events and publications for Old Radleians, to a society with a far broader reach, focused on connecting and developing the whole Radley community for the benefit of all. This has led to a re-energised engagement strategy which blends a mix of social media platforms, publications and events to maximise all points of contact with the community. She is now focusing on how to better leverage the Radley network for current boys and Old Radleians in their early careers, helping them to get an earlier insight into the 'world of work'.
