

Maša Amatt
Director of Development
The Perse School

After a varied career path that took her from several archaeological investigations to United Nations War Crimes Tribunal, Maša happily settled in a career in development. That final move was driven by her passion for education and the astonishing power of philanthropy to change people's lives. Maša started her development career at Christ's College, Cambridge, honed her skills at St Catharine's College and moved to The Perse School in 2013. 2020 will see her move back into higher education when she takes up the role of Development Director at Gonville & Caius College, Cambridge.
